

Are You Paying Staff to Play?

Social Networking is the new Web Phenomenon and its here to stay.

Millions upon millions of people use social network sites to connect with friends and others who work, study and live around them.

Leading site Facebook was originally developed for college and university students but has since been estimated to have over 60,000,000 users worldwide.

Facebooks not alone, MySpace said more than 10m UK users look at its website each month with Bebo recently announcing 6 million users - that's a staggering 1 in 6 of us!

Introducing

CHRONOS

It's Time to Take Control.

NEW

Users of social networking sites can spend hours accessing their profile, checking in with friends, responding to new comments and answering emails. It can be a very addictive routine.

It's because of the time spent and potential security breaches that some organisations have banned access to social networking sites completely to the dismay of unions and staff alike.

But time is money, and if the net effect of this activity is a loss in productivity, who is going to pay for it?

Are you going to pay your staff to socialize?

Now you don't have to - With Chronos™ the dilemma is over.
